What is the Utah Central Committee (UCC)?

The UCC is an organization that stands by the truth that all people, including people in the government, should follow the law. Our constitutions are the law for the government to follow. Under our laws, you have the power to defend your rights or to allow others to help you defend those rights. This is called delegation of authority. You delegate your authority to the government to defend your rights when you elect someone to office. But how do you defend your rights if the government is the one breaking the law? When it fails to protect your rights, or itself engages in violating your rights, you may choose to band together with others to ensure your rights are still protected in practical ways. The Central Committee's goal is to protect the natural rights of any individual who seeks the committee's help and to assist others in banding together to do the same.

The right to protect the freedoms of man in this way is expressly protected by both the US and Utah Constitutions.

Congress shall make no law... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

- 1st Amendment, US Constitution

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

- 10th Amendment, US Constitution

All men have the inherent and inalienable right to enjoy and defend their lives and liberties... to assemble peaceably, protest against wrongs, and petition for redress of grievances...

- Article 1, Section 1, Utah Constitution

Good government is merely an aggregate of authority gifted by the people. The individual does not lose the authority to protect their own rights (or of delegating it to another) just because they first trusted the state with that authority. Ultimately the power resides with the individual. Therefore, people have the right to enforce the law (constitution) on their respective governments. This is a correct constitutional exercise of checks-and-balances protected by the  $10^{th}$  amendment. By joining the UCC you can receive important information and participate in a network of good people, and have at hand some practical communication support and guidance.

What should you do next?

Go to www.UtahCommittee.US and apply for a FREE individual, family, church and/or business membership. You must first sign up for an individual membership before any of the others. Once you have a membership you should create a circle of friends physically close to you who will sign up and thus you will have your own smaller committee in your area. The UCC will help with training. If help beyond your personal circle is needed then the UCC will investigate the issue, expand assistance and seek to implement appropriate solutions.

You may also form a sub-committee that represents a smaller area, or associate to a sub-committee that someone else has formed. We will mentor you through this process if desired and refer you to an accreditation service.

What Does it Cost?

By becoming a UCC member you agree to "pay" for your membership by agreeing to help others in need when you can. There are no monetary requirements to become a member.
